Available License Types for Origin or OriginPro software:

Node-locked License (Also known as "Fixed Seat")	Each computer running the software requires a computer-specific license which will enable the software to run on that computer. The license is obtained from the OriginLab website using a licensing "wizard" provided when you run the software (an offline option is provided). Once the license is obtained, it is saved to the computer with no further internet access required. Licenses can also be deactivated to prepare for computer replacement.
Concurrent Network License (Also known as "Floating Seat")	The software can be installed on any number of networked computers in your organization at a single site. The number of computers that can run the software at the same time is determined at the time of license purchase and is controlled by a FLEXnet license manager that you set up on one of your workstations or servers on your network. A borrowing option is provided to run the software on mobile computers while traveling. Furthermore, you can set up the license manager to limit the software use, such as you can reserve a number of licenses for a user or group of users.
