Re: Technology Fee Submission

The FAU Athletics department supports the concussion research that the Exercise Science and Health Promotion Department has done over the past couple of years. However, the equipment currently being used for research and assessment is outdated.

Within the FAU Athletics department, football student-athletes are given an initial health assessment. If at any point they become concussed, they are immediately assessed. This information not only contributes to important research, but also gives another component in the player's return to play. FAU Athletics would support the Exercise Science and Health Promotion (ESHP) Department's purchases of the latest advanced equipment, so additional assessment may be conducted and current research continued.

In addition to the Athletic Department's use, the ESHP Department also uses the equipment to train their majors, undergraduates and graduates. This amenity assists them in having the latest technology skills upon graduation.
